A Discussion of the “Nostalgia” in Chang Wen-Huan’s Work”Sazanka”

“Depiction of hometown” has been the focus of researchers when they review the works of Chang Wen-Huan, the novelist in Japanese-ruing period. However, the country filed depicted by Chang is neither a real Utopian nor true representation of his own hometown. Reviewing the serial story, Sazanka, by Chang, this paper is to find another different viewpoint from the supposed one, which conventionally compares the main character to Chang as well as the story to the whole picture standing for how the author reflected to the epoch. With analyses of the original elements, such as the narration, characters’ personalities, the plot, and the structure, the possibility of regarding Sazanka as a literature work will be discussed in this paper. Also, with the contemporary comment and criticism, this paper points out the soft context structure and material-priority arrangement in Chang’s writing, as well as the possible reading effects and deficiencies caused by his writing.
